

Now Hiring 250,000 Miracle Workers

➤ THAT'S THE HEADLINE THE ASSOCIATION of Schools of Public Health invokes on its "This is Public Health" Web site to encourage a new generation to enter the field of public health. ASPH, which represents 40 accredited public health training programs across the country, estimates that at least 250,000 more public health workers will be needed by 2020. In addition, schools of public health must train three times the current number of graduates over the next 12 years to meet this growing need. (See story, page 8.)

a host of reasons why people should work in public health. Launched during National Public Health Week by public health students from 17 universities, some 30,000 "This is Public Health" stickers were slapped on everything from public buses to trash cans and water fountains, and photos were uploaded to the campaign's interactive Flickr site. View the stickers in your community on the site's interactive map, join the campaign or watch the "This is Public Health" video at www.thisispublichealth.org.

Recognizing that most people do not understand public health or how it affects their daily lives, ASPH created the "This is Public Health" campaign to let people know we are only as healthy as the world we live in. The site also lists

Bringing Health Home Conference

➤ THIS FALL, THE COLORADO HEALTH Foundation is sponsoring "Bringing Health Home," a statewide conference about local health initiatives. To be held September 21 - September 22 in Pueblo, this conference will help communities in Colorado leverage resources and develop sustainable financing solutions to increase coverage and expand access to health care services. For more information, please visit www.coloradohealth.org/bringing_health_home.aspx.
